I'm planning my second trip to Italy right now and I don't even know where to begin. For preliminary research, I type a city name into Google Images to see the major sights. But not anymore. This time, I'm heading to Minube.

The social travel site really excels at its photo-centric layout. I typed "Italy" into Minube and watched the images roll in. If you're a visual person and you like Foursquare, you'll like this. Minube and its corresponding apps for iOS and Android use content submitted by the community to help travelers plan their next adventure. Users can then save their favorite photos, videos, recommendations, and tips, into a personalized travel guide that's accessible from their mobile device.

Right now, Lake Como is calling my name. Excuse me for a moment...
